Chappaqua Dahlia Gardens

J. H. Siebrecht

Chappaqua, N. Y.

FOREWORD

WHILE ALMOST EVERYBODY admires the wealth of color which dahlias bring to gardens in late summer and early fall, few realize how easy these gorgeous flowers are to grow. Planting and cultivation are, really, very simple, dahlias requiring no more care than any vegetable grown in the kitchen garden, and less than most. As a matter of fact, they are remarkably immune to the attacks of most of the insect pests which make the gardener's life a burden.

Sturdy, rapid and luxuriant in growth, about all dahlias will ask of you is moderately good soil and their fair share of sun and moisture. Give them these, and they will produce stately, colorful blooms in profusion to delight the heart of the flower-lover.

By all means plant several varieties of dahlias this year. In the perennial border; in beds by themselves; as a low screen along a fence . . . in almost any spot you select for them, they will wonderfully enhance the beauty of your grounds and reward you with a riot of color from midsummer until frost.

Starting, if you wish, with a few tubers, in a year or two you will have enough to plant liberally; for dahlias multiply their tubers, and for every root you plant, you will have several for another year.

This list is not as large as many others . . . but it does contain what we believe to be the outstanding varieties in existence to-day. We could list many new varieties each season, but it is our policy to list only those which we have tested by growing in our own gardens, and which have proved their superiority to existing varieties.

ROLL OF HONOR DAHLIAS

The varieties underscored in this list are on the Dahlia Roll of Honor compiled yearly by Mr. Derrill W. Hart and published in the December issue of American Home Magazine. Mr. Hart judges at most of the large shows, and his roll of honor is considered the most dependable guide for buyers demanding the best varieties.

CULTIVATION

Dahlias are easily grown. They require no special treatment or soil to bring them to perfection. An open, sunny situation is the best, but they will also succeed in partial shade.

Plant between May first and June fifteenth. The latter date is the best when growing for exhibition blooms.

Dig holes about three feet apart and six inches deep. Drive a strong stake in each hole, then lay the tuber down flat with the crown toward the stake. Cover with two or three inches of soil until after the plant comes up, then fill in the balance.

We will send full cultural directions with each order upon request. With these you will be better equipped to grow exhibition blooms.

TUBERS

Nothing but strong, healthy divisions of field-grown stock will be shipped. We do not sell pot-grown tubers.

Only the best new and standard varieties tested by us are listed. All obsolete varieties have been eliminated.

WHEN TO ORDER

Stock of some varieties is limited, so to avoid disappointment, we urge that you order early. All orders are filled in rotation. Stock is reserved as the orders are received and shipped late in April or early in May. Tubers shipped before April first are not guaranteed against loss by freezing.

RESPONSIBILITY

We guarantee our product true to name, but do not give any warranty, expressed or implied, and do not guarantee them to live or grow or give other specific results. In case of error on our part we will gladly replace or refund the purchase price of any article that does not prove true to name. It is mutually agreed between the purchaser and ourselves that we shall not at any time be held responsible for a greater amount than the original purchase price of the goods.

TERMS

In order to sell at the lowest possible price we have no charge accounts and request that remittance accompany the order, or a portion thereof and the balance C. O. D. Shipments sent post-paid when remittance in full accompanies the order.

COMPLAINTS

All errors or omissions will be satisfactorily adjusted if we are notified immediately upon receipt of goods.

Select the varieties desired, and order now, thereby avoiding disappointment. We will ship at the proper time.
